

Stafford Law

Rodell Rosel reviews

Turandot, Lyric Opera of Chicago

Badly needed antic vitality came from baritone Zachary Nelson and the clear-voiced tenors Rodell Rosel and Keith Jameson as the commedia dell'arte ministers Ping, Pang and Pong, who managed to be funny and touching at the same time - Chicago Tribune

Dominating the supporting cast was the animated, endearing and touching trio of ministers Ping, Pang and Pong (Zachary Nelson, Rodell Rosel and Keith Jameson) - Chicago Tribune

The commedia dell'arte trio of Ping, Pang and Pong provided just the right amount of light humor and contrast in what is for the most part, a pretty grim opera. Keith Jameson (Pong) and Rodell Rosel (Pang) are two of our finest character tenors and sang with nimble articulation and personality without going over the top - Chicago Classical Review

Zachary Nelson, Keith Jameson, and the always unforgettable Rodell Rosel play the entertaining trio with dull delight - Stage and Cinema

Together with tenors Rodell Roselle [sic] and Keith Jameson, Nelson made the second act's opening trio quite memorable - Seen and Heard International

Other notable vocal performances in the production include Zachary Nelson's Ping (Zachary played Donner last season in Lyric's Das Rheingold), Ryan Opera Center alumnus Rodell Rosel's Pang, and Keith Jameson's Pong. The trio worked well together, and brought in some much needed comic relief - Opera Sense

Zachary Nelson, Rodell Rosel, and Keith Jameson bring an essential comic relief as Ping, Pang, and Pong, respectively. The trio

defly navigates between snarky humor and a genuine lament over the state of their country - Chicagoland Musical Theater

Baritone Zachary Nelson (Ping) and tenors Rodell Rosel (Pang) and Keith Jameson (Pong) have voices that blend beautifully and bring out the pain that coexists with the trio's sarcastic humor - kdhx.org

Zachary Nelson, Rodell Rosel, and Keith Jameson as ministers Ping, Pang, and Pong respectively, were a breath of fresh air as the Greek chorus of almost Gilbert and Sullivan energy - The Theater Times

The night's other delights were the Chicago Children's Choir and the comic trio of court jesters played by Zachary Nelson, Rodell Rosal and Keith Jameson in such a way that surely, the last laugh belongs to them - Chicago Stage Standard

Puccini has peppered his Chinese palace with courtiers Ping, Pang and Pong, sung respectively by American baritone Zachary Nelson; Filipino-American tenor, Rodell Rosel, a Ryan Center alum, and American tenor Keith Jameson. They are turned out in hilarious attire and provide comic relief in this sometimes sluggish tale - Classical Voice America

More of the modern patina overlaying the fairy tale is sung by the trio of ministers who recount what a drag it has been for everyone to watch the cruelty of this ice princess play out-- Ping (Zachary Nelson), Pang (Rodell Rosel), and Pong (Keith Jameson). The distinctness of these three performers' voices is easy to appreciate - Picture This Post

Also somewhat unsettling are Zachary Nelson, Rodell Rosel, and Keith Jameson as the courtiers Ping, Pang, and Pong, here depicted as clowns fully made-up in the style of Chinese classical theatre. They're quite funny, and at the beginning of the second act, even a little sweet, but they easily slip

Candleway / Broad Street / Sutton Valence / Kent / ME17 3AJ
telephone (44) (0) 1622 840 038/ email:staffordlaw@btinternet.com
http://www.stafford-law.com

Stafford Law Ltd act as Agents only and accept no responsibility as Principals
Directors: David Law/Dominic Stafford Uglow Registered in England & Wales Company No. :04451527Member of the IAMA

Stafford Law

back and forth between friendly and menacing - Around the Town Chicago

Much more interesting stage performances came from the goading and homesick administrators Ping (Zachary Nelson), Pang (Rodell Rosel) and Pong (Keith Jameson) - Windy City Media Group

Turandot's three ministers, Ping, Pang and Pong, bring to the opera a spin on classic Commedia dell'arte style. They are brilliantly performed by famous American baritone Zachary Nelson (Ping), charismatic Filipino-American tenor Rodell Rosel (Pang), and talented American tenor Keith Jameson (Pong) - Patch

The Merry Widow, Florentine Opera Milwaukee

In the comic role of the ambassador's aide, tenor Rodell Rosel plays Radar O'Reilly to Offenbach's Henry Blake, a put-upon comic foil but also the guy who makes things work; his show-stopping song with the grisettes of Maxim's justly earned big applause - Journal Sentinel

Madama Butterfly, Seattle Opera

Of special note was Rodell Rosel's Goro. More often than not this stock character is portrayed stereotypically and two-dimensionally. However, Rosel brought extra depth to his depiction, with comic and dramatic flourishes that fleshed out the inscrutable characteristics that lay beneath the surface. Vocally, he brought an unusual richness to his performance, staying in character yet bringing a certain melodic attractiveness that is not easy to achieve in this role - Broadway World

Rodell Rosel's Goro was a study in unctuousness - bachtrack.com

A wily and adept Goro - Seattle Times

As staged, the girl is vetted by marriage broker Goro (tenor Rodell Rosel, who is always slimily great in these sorts of caricature roles) - thestranger.com

Die Zauberflöte, Seattle Opera

Rodell Rosel found admirable balance in the tricky role of Monostatos - Seattle Times

Debuting tenor Rodell Rosel sounded appropriately gruff and convincingly diabolical in the smaller yet pivotal role of the Queen of the Night's evil counterpart Monostatos, and showed great comic flair - bachtrack.com

Los Angeles Opera, Les contes d'Hoffmann

Special note should be taken of the performance of character tenor Rodell Rosel as Spalanzani, the creator of the mechanical toys Olympia and Cochenille.

I have long admired Rosel's work. He was a vigorous Spalanzani, excitedly hopping around, leaving a strong impression of a toymaker living in a world of fantasy - Opera War Horses

Spalanzani, the absurdly funny Rodell Rosel - Broadway World

Rodell Rosel was a self-important Spalanzani who looked much like one of Offenbach's contemporaries, Richard Wagner - Opera Today

Los Angeles Opera, Salome

A very lively quintet of Jews, led with precision by Rodell Rosel, enlivened the proceedings and managed the difficult task of bringing their tricky music off with ease without ever falling into unwanted farce - Parterre

Rodell Rosel, Josh Wheeler, Brian Michael Moore, Carlos Enrique Santelli and Gabriel Vamvulecu were most energetic as the Five Jews - Opera Today

Candleway / Broad Street / Sutton Valence / Kent / ME17 3AJ
telephone (44) (0) 1622 840 038/ email:staffordlaw@btinternet.com
http://www.stafford-law.com

Stafford Law Ltd act as Agents only and accept no responsibility as Principals
Directors: David Law/Dominic Stafford Uglow Registered in England & Wales Company No. :04451527Member of the IAMA

Stafford Law

Los Angeles Opera, Die Zauberfloete

Tenor Rodell Rosel stole every scene as the monstrous overseer Monastatos - Chicago Tribune

Rodell Rosel was once again a wonderfully characterful Monastatos, relishing his over-the-top villainy - Chicago Classical Review

Rodell Rosel reviews

Rodell Rosel, who played Mime in this season's production of Das Rheingold, plays the similarly wretched character Monastatos in The Magic Flute. A fine actor and a gifted tenor, Rosel is the kind of performer who becomes his role so completely that he is nearly impossible to recognize from one opera to the next - Stage and Cinema

Memorable performances among the uniformly solid cast include tenor Rodell Rosel, who turns the problematic villain Monastatos into a nasty/funny scene stealer - Chicago Reader

Also deserving mention are tenor Rodell Rosel, a Ryan Opera Center alumnus who offers an exuberant comic turn worthy of Mel Brooks as the jailer, Monastatos - Chicago Sun Times

Lyric Opera of Chicago, Das Rheingold

Rodell Rosel's juicy character tenor and acrobatic energy enlivened the fearful, resentful Mime - Classical Review

Ryan alum Rodell Rosel whined and cowered in a portrayal of the enslaved dwarf Mime that was as much vocal as physical - Chicago Tribune

Houston Grand Opera, Das Rheingold

Tenor Rodell Rosel deftly blended the essential elements of comic sprightliness, insidious duplicity and corrosive greed to create a colorfully absorbing Mime - Opera News

The brilliantly animated, often cloying tenor Rodell Rosel as Mime did much to provoke a pervasive energy in the first act, and though he is a generally distasteful character throughout the opera, I was sorry when Siegfried chopped off his head towards the end of the second act. Rosel is a star, and let's hope he returns soon to the HGO stage - Houston Culturemap

Found by evil Nibelung dwarf Mime (an oily and creepy Rodell Rosel), the child is raised in hope he will eventually kill dragon Fafner - Houston Press

As the scheming Alberich, Richard Paul Fink crept through the second act with reliable artistry, and tenor Rodell Rosel, as Mime, embodied the slippery part with a special deviousness in his voice, which, I imagine can sound equally sweet given the talent he displayed - Bachtrack

The remainder of the cast were a powerful, drama-enhancing team. They included Iain Paterson (Wotan), Rodell Rosel (Mime), Richard Paul Fink (Alberich), Meredith Arwady (Erda) and Andrea Silvestrelli (whose deep bass provided Fafner with the menace lacking in the giant's stage contraption) - Art and Seek

Rodell Rosel makes a wickedly effective Mime - Houston Chronicle

Houston Grand Opera, Das Rheingold

Rodell Rosel provided a vividly acted, nicely sung, characterization of the conniving Nibelung, Mime. The role of Mime (who appears in both "Rheingold" and "Siegfried") is arguably the epitome of the repertory that defines the character tenor's craft. Only the part of Siegfried is longer than Mime's in this opera. I have been reporting on Rosel's evolving career as a character tenor over the past decade [see Australia Opera's "Butterfly" Charms Pittsburgh - October 19, 2007] and recognize him as one of the

Candleway / Broad Street / Sutton Valence / Kent / ME17 3AJ
telephone (44) (0) 1622 840 038/ email:staffordlaw@btinternet.com
http://www.stafford-law.com

Stafford Law Ltd act as Agents only and accept no responsibility as Principals
Directors: David Law/Dominic Stafford Uglow Registered in England & Wales Company No. :04451527Member of the IAMA

Stafford Law

handful of artists able to project memorable portraits in iconic comprimario roles - Opera War Horses

Rodell Rosel reviews

Lyric Opera of Chicago, Der Rosenkavalier

Excellent support came from the hilarious Italian “intriguers” Valzacchi and Annina, played with style and fine comic timing by Rodell Rosel and Megan Marino - Parterre

Always a lively presence, tenor Rodell Rosel was deliciously oily as Valzacchi, the publisher of a Viennese gossip sheet. Aided by the gleefully corrupt Annina (Megan Marino), he reveled in plots to bedevil the rich and famous - Chicago Sun Times

There were sparky performances all around from Rene Barbera as the dulcet-voiced Italian Singer, Rodell Rosel and Megan Marino (a dynamo) as the intriguers Valzacchi and Annina, Laura Wilde as Sophie’s duenna and young Zach Thomas as the Marschallin’s diminutive page - Chicago Tribune

Rodell Rosel and Megan Marino were a characterful duo as Valzacchi and Annina, if at times over the top in their antics as the parasitic, double-dealing schemers - Chicago Classical Review

Dallas Opera, Great Scott

...while tenor Rodell Rosel and baritone Michael Mayes capture the fun of their stereotypical opera singer roles - Opera News

Rodell Rosel and Michael Mayes as two self-absorbed members of the Rosa Dolorosa cast provided both amusement and unexpected insights with their preening behavior and Mr McNally's words. Both are excellent singers and comic actors - Bachtrack

Rodell Rosel sings the role of Anthony Candolino, who embodies tenor stereotypes (while denying that they apply to him.) - Opera Warhorses

Rosel has a gorgeous, strong tone and clearly has fun parodying tenor stereotypes in this role - D Magazine

Two unadulterated stereotypes are played by tenor Rodell Rosel and baritone Michael Mayes, both overly proud of their high notes. Mayes character, a sendup of barihunks, is even prouder of his pecs and abs and takes his shirt off at a moment's notice. Both play it up but also have the high-note goods to pull it off - Theater Jones

Two other excellent singers, tenor Rodell Rosel and baritone Michael Mayes, fill out the cast for the imaginary opera, with plenty of would-be divo antics - Dallas News

Candleway / Broad Street / Sutton Valence / Kent / ME17 3AJ
telephone (44) (0) 1622 840 038/ email:staffordlaw@btinternet.com
http://www.stafford-law.com

Stafford Law Ltd act as Agents only and accept no responsibility as Principals
Directors: David Law/Dominic Stafford Uglow Registered in England & Wales Company No. :04451527Member of the IAMA